For over 25 years, Dan Costello has devoted himself to building a unique reputation in insurance from the ground up. For two decades he worked for Costello & Sons Insurance Brokers, first as an employee, then as a salesman, and ultimately as its president. In 2005, Dan sold his interests in Costello & Sons and started a new company: Farallone Pacific Insurance Services.

Now Dan heads an insurance organization that is completely responsive to the objectives of its clients—businesses, individuals, and nonprofits. The Farallone vision encompasses a wider range of specialized services and risk management techniques than most other agencies. With 28 employees and over 3,800 clients, Dan's group prides itself in excellent customer service from an organization that is socially and environmentally conscious.

Under Dan's direction, Farallone consults with leading Bay Area businesses and nonprofit organizations to manage risk, focus on workplace safety, and establish safe practices for employees, volunteers and the public. His experience has led to numerous seminars covering topics that range from unusual risks faced by educational institutions to managing workers compensation claims.
